ELIJAH CLARENCE HILLS was, from 1922 till his death, first a Professor of Spanish and then Professor of Romance Philology at the University of California. A native of Illinois, reared in Florida, he graduated from Cornell in 1892 and studied in Paris; he was successively professor in Rollins College, in Colorado College, librarian of the Hispanic Society of America, and head for romance languages at Indiana University. For his distinguished achievements in Spanish philology, he was made Knight Commander of the Royal Order of Queen Isabel.

In Professor Hills were combined vast and precise learning with extraordinary humanity. Though a grammarian and philologist, his teaching implied the great world. He had a talent for friendship: capable of the seclusions of the scholar and editor and born to an inviolable personal dignity, he possessed also an uncommon social charm which exercised itself in widening circles. His charity showed as kindness, deference, tolerance, the sharing of the possessions his long labors had accumulated. He was a wise collector of books, and specialized in Spanish lexicons. Mrs. Hills presented to the University of California his collection of books, one of which is here inscribed to his memory.

PREFACE

This little volume is intended to serve as an aid to the English speaking persons who are endeavoring to learn the first principles of the Creole language as it is spoken in Haiti.

This booklet should be used as a supplement and guide in the actual practice of speaking with the natives.

The authority of the Chief of the Gendarmerie has been obtained to utilize the net proceeds derived from the sale of this book as a welfare fund for patients in the hospitals of the Gendarmerie.

This fund is to be expended under the supervision of the Medical Director of the Gendarmerie d'Haiti, for the purpose of purchasing reading matter, games, phonographs, and other forms of amusement for the patients. It may also be used for any other purpose which the Chief of the Gendarmerie may authorize.

This volume was originally started under the authority of the former Chief of the Gendarmerie Lt. Col. F. M. Wise. U. S. M. C.

Several Medical Officers of the Gendarmerie d'Haiti have taken part in the preparation of this book. Médical Inspector C. J. Brown, Gendarmerie d'Haiti, Pharmacist G. G. Strott, U. S. Navy, and Lient. B.D. Sheffield, Gendarmerie d'Haiti, have rendered active assistance in the compilation of this data.

Mr H. P. Davis of Port au Prince has written the chapter on the History of Haiti.

The vocabulary was arranged by Lieutenant EARL C. BEAULAC, Service Medical, G. d'H., who, by the way has been credited as the most fluent speaker, among the American Occupation, of the Creole language.

The necessity of a book of this kind is obvious to the long term residents in Haiti. To the «newcomer», we invite him to find any similar book on this subject. The chances are that he will be unable to purchase any other reading matter which will serve as an outline in studying the Creole language.

Our prime motive in the publication of this matter is to facilitate and expedite the adaptation of the American military personnel to the conditions in Haiti.

In order for the American Occupation to accomplish the best results in Haiti, it is considered desirable that members of the above organisation arriving in Haiti, acquire, as soon as possible, some knowledge of the country in which they are serving. For example, an elementary knowledge of the history of the Island, and the habits and traits of the natives, their laws, institutions, governments, etc., is considered to be a help to the new arrivals in adjusting themselves to the environments.

A compilation of some of these facts is included in this book in order to render such data accessible.

In conclusion we wish to state that we do not pose as an authority on such subjects nor do we wish to claim any originality. This matter is a compilation of such data which we have collected from the various authorities for our own information and the publication of such proved to be a secondary consideration.

A Short History of the Gendarmerie d'Haiti

— « O » —

The Gendarmerie d'Haiti was organized in accordance with Article « X », of the Convention of September 16, 1915, between the Governments of the United States and the Republic of Haiti, quoted as follows :

« The Haitien Government obligates itself for the preservation of domestic peace, the security of individual rights and the full observance of the provisions of this treaty; to create without delay an efficient constabulary (gendarmerie), urban and rural, composed of native Haitiens. This constabulary (gendarmerie) shall be organized and officered by Americans, appointed by the President of the United States. The Haitien Government shall clothe these officers with the proper and necessary authority and uphold them in the performance of their functions. These officers shall be replaced by Haitiens as they, by examination conducted under direction of a board to be selected by the Senior American Officer of this constabulary (gendarmerie), in the presence of a representative of the Haitien Government are found to be qualified to assume such duties. The Constabulary (gendarmérie) herein provided for, shall, under the direction of the Haitien Government, have supervision and control of arms and ammunition, military supplies, and traffic therein, throughout the country. The high contracting parties agree that the stipulations in this article are necessary to prevent factional strife and disturbances. »

Shortly after the Occupation, July 25, 1915, on the anticipation of a Treaty which was to authorize the Gendarmerie, tentative plans of organization were drawn up and details were made of commissioned and non-commissioned officers from the Occupation for duty in connection with recruiting and mobilizing this new force. This work was started early in September 1915, and by June 1916, out of a field of apparent barren ground, the Gendarmerie became a corps of considerable worth— comprising an established force of 123 officers and 2,533 men, fully equipped, and organized into 19 companies, distributed to 140 posts throughout the Republic of Haiti.

The Gendarmerie took over the division of Public Works from the Marine Corps Detachments stationed throughout the Island, and until the spring of 1917 had supervision over the construction of roads, telephone and telegraph systems, and general public works improvement of the Island. In June 1919, or there about, this detail was turned over to the Engineer of Haiti. During the period in which the Gendarmerie had direct charge of this work, many miles of road were constructed. To this date, in the interior of the Island, and even in some of the large sea coast towns, the Gendarmerie representative (officer) stationed there still retains a supervisory position over the Public Works within his district.

A similar function, in regard to the Public Health Service, was also performed by the Gendarmerie, prior to the organization of the present Sanitary Service of Haiti. During that time the Gendarmerie performed such functions as the establishment of outlying hospitals, the general cleaning up of cities and towns occupied by the Gendarmerie, sanitary inspections, quarantine and the like.

The Gendarmerie functions as a military police force or constabulary, corresponding closely to the « Texas Rangers », « Northwest Mounted Police » etc : it executes the laws of the country, it is responsible for the administration of prisons. Every section of Haiti, even the most remote, is visited at intervals by the officer personnel of the Gendarmerie. Its influence extends into every town, hamlet, and individual home in the Republic.

It would be very difficult to give a worthy account of the many difficulties and obstacles overcome in the materialisation of the original plans of the organization. Its birth occurred at a time when the general attitude of the population toward the Occupation was extremely adverse; owing to frequent revolutions there was little respect for authority, there was much illiteracy, and the standard of physical type was low. Certain physical standards had been established and in consequence the recruiting of a force of 3 000 men conforming to this standard bordered on impossibility. It was sometimes necessary to examine 2,000 men to fill a company of 120.

These conditions did not constitute the only and greatest difficulties met with. There were barracks to be erected, or existing suitable buildings had to be reconstructed to serve as barracks; regulations for the government of the Gendarmerie and rules of police to conform to the civil, rural and penal codes of Haiti had to be written and taught to the men; and there was the almost insurmountable task of teaching this raw undisciplined mass the school of the squad. Difficulties were further increased through the differences in tongue of teacher and pupil; the pupil speaking a very low patois French and the teacher, except in a very few instances, speaking only English. The material part was accomplished with only very meager allowances of money, for in the beginning there was no provision of funds made for construction of barracks, hospitals, the purchase of uniforms, rifles and equipment, which was all effected through great economy of the funds allotted to annual maintenance. Great physical hardships were also met with at the same time, for each company was allotted approximately 1000 square miles of territory to police, requiring long difficult trips over the worst of trails and mountain passes.

For purposes of administration the Gendarmerie is divided into two departments, each commanded by a Colonel. The Artibonite Valley and all territory south of it forms the Department of the South, while all territory north of the valley forms the Department of the North. Each Department is divided into districts, sub-districts and posts. Districts are normally commanded by Captains, sub-districts by Lieutenants, and posts by non-commissioned officers. The boundaries of a district correspond closely to that of the old commune.

At the head of the organization is the Chief of the Gendarmerie, who holds the rank of Major General, and whose headquarters are at Port-au-Prince, the Capital. His staff consists of the Assistant Chief (a Brigadier General,) the Quartermaster (a Colonel,) the Medical Director (a Colonel), the Intelligence Officer (a Major), and the Adjutant (a Lieutenant).

The Assistant Chief has additional duties as the officer in charge of prisons, which are administered by the Gendarmerie personnel.

The Medical Director is the head of the Medical Department, which consists of two Inspectors, each with the rank of Major, ten Lieutenants and sixty one native hospital corpsmen. Medical attention is accorded all of the Gendarmerie personnel and all prisoners. Each sub-district has a trained hospital corpsman.

The National Penitentiary at Port-au-Prince was remodeled and much additional construction was accomplished by the Gendarmerie. The sanitation was greatly improved, many modern conveniences were installed, cells were enlarged, ventilation was improved, and in every respect this prison will now compare favorably with any prison in the world.

The Haitien Coast Guard consisted originally of three auxiliary schooners, the « Republic, » the « Independance, » and the « Progress, » all manned by Gendarmerie personnel. The « Republic » was burned at St Marc and the Progress went ashore and was wrecked at Aux Cayes. The « Haiti » was purchased in 1918 and was sold two years later. The « Indépendance, » the remaining ship, is a two masted auxiliary schooner, and is manned by three officers and 15 enlisted men. It was formerly a racing yacht and at one time won a cup in a race from New-York to Bermuda.

Invaluable services have been rendered by the Gendarmerie toward the pacification of the country, The Gendarmes have proven dependable in times of stress and hardship, and there are many instances of bravery, valor and devotion worthy of the greatest praise, and which redound to the credit of the organization.

A BRIEF OUTLINE

The History of Haiti

In reviewing the history of Haiti, one is struck with the fact that, since the discovery by Columbus, [conditions on the islands have alternated between short periods of prosperity with bright promise for the future and a state of anarchy and rebellion, accompanied by their inseparable companions, destruction of economic resources and limitation of progress.

It is as impossible to question the heroism and energy of the early Spanish adventurers as it is to deny that their cruelty and greed resulted in the complete destruction of the race which on their arrival was the owner of the soil and which by all laws of humanity and expediency, should have been fostered and protected. The history of French colonial government in Haiti, excepting for the material progress achieved, was little better. Both Spain and France lost their exceedingly valuable colonies through lack of consideration of dictates of humanity.

Discovery 1492

After landing at San Salvador on the 16th of October, 1492, and touching at some of the islands of the Bahama group, Columbus sighted the coast of Cuba on October 28 h.

Disappointed at not finding on this island, which he took to be the mainland of Asia, the fabled cities of Marco Polo, he cruised along the coast, and rounding the Eastern extremity of Cuba, saw in the distance the mountains of Haiti. The Admiral had heard from the Indians rumors of the riches of Babeque and, hoping that the high mountains in the distance marked the shore of this mythical island, he set sail and on the evening of December 6th, entered a fine harbour which he named Môle St. Nicolas.

On the 12th of December, 1492, the Admiral landed at the Baie des Moustiques, there erected a cross and took possession of the island, which he named Hispanola.

Wreck of Santa Maria

Sailing along the North coast and landing at Tortuga, a small island directly north of the present town of Port-de-Paix, Columbus entered the Bay of Acul, and continuing his voyage a few days later was wrecked on a reef off the small town of Petit-Anse at the entrance of the harbour of Cap-Haitien. The flagship «Santa Maria» was a complete loss, and, finding the Indians friendly and not having room for all of his men, the Admiral decided to call for volunteers to remain on the island, while he returned to Spain to report his discoveries and secure assistance in establishing a colony.

The contrast between the hardships of a long tedious trip, in an overcrowded boat, and the indolent life of the savages so appealed to his men, that Columbus had no difficulty in securing the necessary volunteers, and having erected, with the friendly help of the Indians a tower from the materials saved from the wreck, he sailed for Spain.

First Settlement by White Men

La Navidad, as Columbus named this hastily constructed fortress, was therefore the first settlement of white men in the Western Hemisphere.

It was almost a year later before Columbus again sighted the mountains of Haiti and found his settlement destroyed and also learned that his colony had been exterminated by the Indians.

Founding of Isabella 1493

Columbus appears to have realized that this, the first massacre of «Whites», was justified by outrageous treatment of peaceably disposed and friendly Indians, and instead of waiting to punish the natives, he sailed to the East, and about midway between the present town of Monte Christi and Porto Plata (Dominican Republic) founded the first real settlement of Europeans in the new world, which he named « Isabella » in honor of his sovereign.

The choice of this locality was unfortunate and the settlement was soon abandoned, the Spaniards gradually spreading out over the eastern half of the island, and by their horrible cruelty and greed for gold left in their wake a devastated country and a desolated population.

The Spaniards found on their arrival a population variously estimated at from 800.000 to 2.000 000 peaceable, amiable but indolent and self-indulgent aborigines, living in an environment designed by nature for just such people.

Aboriginal Government

The Government, typified by five “ Caciques ” or chiefs, while arbitrary, was confined to the simplest element of tribal control.

Labor was performed only as the necessities of the people demanded the slight exertion incident to the cultivation of the crops that beneficent Nature had provided.

Cruelty of Spaniards

This simple and essentially kindly government was superceded by the brutal administration of Spanish adventurers whose sole object was to secure as much gold as the labor of the enslaved natives could produce from the accumulated deposits in the streams.

The history of Spanish rule in Santo Domingo, during the first one hundred years, while glorious in achievement, in so far as the spirit of the times was concerned, was typical of the Spanish method of colonization, which, pursued until 1898, resulted finally in the loss of all Spanish possessions in America.

In 1508, sixteen years after the discovery, the native population was reported to the Spanish court as not over 60,000 and in 1514 it was estimated that the total aboriginal population of the island did not exceed 14,000 souls.

Inception of Slave Trade 1510

Negroes, imported from Africa to replace the rapidly disappearing Indians, were treated with extraordinary cruelty. The records of the slave trade with Santo Domingo are perhaps the most distressing in the annals of this unfortunate traffic in Humanity.

The establishment of the French in Haiti was the direct result of the short-sighted policy of the Spanish Royal and Supreme Council of the Indies, which passed laws prohibiting trade by other nations with the new world.

In direct defiance of these measures, French, English, and Dutch traders, supported at least in spirit by their government, dealt more or less openly with the Spanish settlements. From this trade developed the privateers, buccaneers and pirates which for many years infested the Caribbean waters.

Inception of French interests in Haiti 1630

In 1630 refugees from one of the small settlements of privateers which had been destroyed by Spanish warships landed on Tortuga Island, and from this desperate little band of French, Dutch and English grew, in time, a settlement of « freebooters » or “Brethren of the Sea,” who, by their habit of curing the meat of wild cattle over small fires or “bucans”, became known as « Buccaneers. »

In 1667 the Island of Tortuga passed under the control of the Government of France.

Spain recognizes French claims 1697

Increasing in numbers and influence under the energetic rule of the French governors, these the of Tortuga

people gradually built settlements on the mainland and in 1697 Spain recognized the claim of France to approximately the area now included in the Republic of Haiti.

The French rule in this rapidly increasing colony was the very antithesis of that of Spain. Rapid strides were made in agriculture and from the beginning of the eighteenth century until the French revolution was, with short intervals of depression, a period of progress unequaled in the history of colonial development.

Introduction of Sugar cane

The extraordinary success which attended the introduction of sugar cane resulted in an increasing demand for negroes slaves. Between the years 1680 and 1790 over 1 000.000 negroes were imported into the colony. In 1728 the number of slaves, in spite of a tremendous mortality, was estimated at 50 000 and in 1790 at over 480.000.

Records of the colonial government for 1790 show that there were in the colony :

Whites,	30 331	exclusive of French troops
Negro slaves	434.429	» « domestic slaves
« «	46.000	(estimate) « «
Mulattoes	24.000	(estimate)

In the first « Buccaneer » settlement there were no white women and later in the French settlements women were in the minority. The consequent union of whites with negro slaves resulted in the development of a mulatto caste which in time assumed vital importance in the political life of the colony.

The slave trade and the commerce with San Domingo engaged over one-third of the merchant marine of France. The exports from this colony were produced from over 3,000 indigo plantations, 2,800 coffee plantations, 792 sugar plantations, 69 cocoa plantations, 705 cotton plantations and many distilleries of rum and many tanneries. Over 2 500,000 acres of land were in cultivation and approximately 400,000 slaves were employed in the fields.

The political history of French San-Domingo from 1789 to the Declaration of Independence by Dessalines in 1804 is far too complicated to review in this brief outline.

Political conditions in France

During this period the French nation threw off the yoke of a degenerate royalty, and established a Republic. Political conditions in France profoundly affected the colonies and in French San Domingo in particular opened the way to vitally important changes.

Movements started in England to ameliorate the condition of the Black Race, spread to France and there centered largely in a semi-political campaign to assist the mulattoes in the French colony of San Domingo.

From this movement came the support of the ill-fated attempt of Oge and Chavannes to secure equality for the mulattoes.

The Mulattoes

The "people of color," as the mulattoes called themselves, occupied a most unfortunate position in the colony. Many of them were educated, and conducted large and profitable plantations. They were, however, granted no political or civil rights and the "Whites", dissatisfied with the home government and at war among themselves united only in a determination to deny to the mulattoes any semblance of civil, social, or political equality.

Political changes in France reacted on colonial conditions and led to internal dissension among the whites, conflict with the mulattoes and finally to a revolt of the "blacks".

The successful revolt of the slaves in French San Domingo accomplished a revolution more sweeping in its effects on the social and political condition of the victors than any in the annals of history. The great mass of densely ignorant and half-savage blacks produced such extraordinary characters as Toussaint Louverture, Dessalines and Christophe, and from the comparatively small number of mulattoes, Pétion, Boyer and many more men of unusual ability.

The result of this revolution was a complete change in the fundamental basis of the social and economic situation of the country, in the inception of a new nation and the expulsion of the white race from a land which they had developed to an extremely high state of productiveness.

It is hopeless to attempt in this brief review to follow closely the progress of this long-drawn-out and complicated struggle for freedom. The French fighting among themselves contributed to their own ruin : both England and Spain, at war with France, at various times attempted to secure this much coveted colony and by their interference added to the unfortunate records of a period of savage and inhumane warfare.

Toussaint Louverture

Led by Toussaint Louverture, one of, if not the greatest of the black race, the slaves finally secured what amounted to complete freedom and even conquered the Spanish part of the Island, and under the wise rule of their great leader governed it fairly and efficiently.

Final Expulsion of the Whites

Napoleon, finding in Europe no more worlds to conquer, finally decided to regain his lost colony and despatched under his brother-in-law, General Leclerc, an expedition of over 25,000 of his finest troops.

The struggle, renewed and accompanied by acts almost inconceivable in their barbarous cruelty, finally led to the withdrawal of the French, who, decimated by disease, were only too glad to depart with the remnants of as fine an army as had ever crossed the seas.

Dessalines 1804-1806

Toussaint, who had been sent to France in chains, died in prison, and was succeeded by the ferocious Dessalines, who, with the aid of such lieutenants as Christophe and Petion, representing the two divisions of the race, finally on January 1, 1804, proclaimed himself Governor-General for life. In October of the same year he was proclaimed Emperor of « Haiti », the name of the aborigines for the country, and on October 17, 1806, he was assassinated, while on the way to quell a revolt against his authority.

The death of Dessalines plunged the country into the first of the series of internecine, and suicidal conflicts, which have since marred the pages of Haitian history.

Christophe and Petion

Christophe and Petion, while serving under Dessalines in positions of almost equal power, dif-ferred mentally, morally and physically, and their ideas of Government were as opposite as their characters.

Christophe, educated only in the hard school of slavery, and later through the years of struggle under negro leaders, sincerely believed in the form of government established by Toussaint, and continued by Dessalines. He was a natural despot and planned for his country a dictatorship perhaps best suited to the needs of his people.

Petion, on the other hand, was highly educated and cultured, familiar with the European governments, and sincere in his dreams for an ideal republic based on the suffrage of the people.

Christophe, confident of his control, prepared to assume the dictatorship laid down by his old chief. Petion, not trusting to a conflict of force, resorted to politics, and through his control of the Constitutional Assembly at Port-au-Prince, drafted a constitution, based on his ideals, and so restrictive of the powers of the President, that it was a foregone conclusion that his rival would have none of it.

Christophe was elected by the Assembly on December 25, 1806, over the protests of his followers, who withdrew rather than vote for Petion's restrictive constitution.

As was to be expected, Christophe, ignoring his election, gathered his armies in the North and advanced on Port-au-Prince, near which town he met and defeated Petion on January 1, 1807.

Without following up this victory, Christophe returned to the North and on February 17th was elected by his self-chosen Assembly « President of the State of Haiti ».

On March 9th, of the same year, the Assembly of Port-au-Prince, elected Petion, President of the Republic of Haiti, while in the South, an insurgent chief, Govuran, set up a government of his own.

Thus was inaugurated the Republic of Haiti, in a country of less than 10.200 square miles, and not over 500.000 inhabitants, there were three governments at war with each other, and each dependent upon the practically despotic will of its chosen ruler.

Christophe ruled as « President » until March, 1811, when he assumed the title of « Henri I, King of Haiti. ». On October 8, 1820, finding his power gone and his people in revolt, he shot himself on the steps of his wonderful palace of Sans Souci. The Kingdom of Haiti; was on the death of Christophe consolidated with the Haitian Republic.

Petion, after being re-elected for four years, and finally for life, served until March 29, 1819, when he died in office and was followed by his close friend and chosen successor, Boyer, who united the whole Island under one government and ruled until deposed by « a party devoted to liberty » in 1843. This « liberty » did not materialize and in the next four years four Presidents held office. Soulouque, elected President in 1847, not satisfied with the almost despotic power of this office, crowned himself Emperor, in 1849, Emperor Faustin I, as Soulouque called himself. was overthrown by Geffrard in 1859, who in turn was forced to resign in 1867 after a sincere but unsuccessful attempt to establish in Haiti a real democracy.

From 1867 to 1911, ten Presidents held office. In 1912, Leconte was blown up in the explosion of his palace after a short term of one year. Including Leconte and Sam, who was murdered in the French Legation in 1915, six Presidents held office in three years. In 115 years of independence 27 constituted rulers have governed the Haitian people, fourteen of whom have served less than one year each.

Guillaume Vilbrun Sam, elected to the Presidency in March, 1915, was assassinated by a mob after a turbulent rule of a little over four months.

On July 27th Sam was driven from his palace and took refuge in the French Legation. On the same day he ordered the murder of over 160 political prisoners. On July 28th, infuriated by this wanton killing, the populace, led by some of the most prominent men in Haiti, dragged Sam from the French Legation and literally tore him in pieces.

On the afternoon of July 28th a detachment of the 1st Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, was landed and guards were placed at the French and American legations and the Caserne. The following day patrols were established throughout the city and Marine guards took possession of the Bureau d'Arrondissement and the Arsenal.

On August 8th, under the protection of the Marines, the Senate elected to the Presidency, Philip Sudre Dartiguenave, for a term of seven years ending May 15, 1922.

Martial law was declared on August 20th and on the 16th of September the present Treaty between the United States and Haiti was signed at Port-au-Prince.

On May 3, 1916, the Treaty was proclaimed at Washington by the President of the United States.

The present Constitution was ratified by popular vote on June 12, 1918.

Additional Data on Haïti

Habits and traits of the People

The native Haitiens are usually very quiet and peace loving. They are of a generous and sympathetic disposition, and their community life is ideal. Assistance is always given to the needy; and they take pride in their hospitality.

The women are active, industrious, and perform a « goodly portion of the manual labor of the country. » They are adepts at sale and barter. A most interesting and picturesque sight are the long lines of market women constantly coming and going on the highways leading to the towns. The market produce is either carried on the heads of the women or on burros. As pedestrians the women are above comparison, walking miles and miles with no apparent fatigue.

Markets are maintained in all the villages, towns and cities, and it is from these markets that news and gossip are disseminated throughout the country. Minor trading is carried on at all cross roads.

Travellers are cordially greeted by everyone they meet and information as to the country is gladly given,

Distances are reckoned by time rather than by distance, and it is well for the new arrival to keep this always in mind, when travelling in the country districts.

News travels rapidly owing to the large number of voyagers and their habits of visiting.

The people are religious ; every town of any consequence has its place of worship, and it is well patronized by all. Towns not large enough to maintain a priest in residence are periodically visited by priests from larger towns who ride regular circuits , holding services in every town through which they pass.

Visiting, riding, dancing, and cock-fighting form the principal amusements in the country.

Health Conditions

Malaria is very prevalent and is the principal febrile disease of Haiti. The abundant vegetation, the lack of drainage, etc, leads to accumulation of water which forms ideal breeding places for mosquitoes. The bite of the infected mosquito transmits the disease and the frequency of malaria will be diminished only when their breeding places are climated. The probability of acquiring the disease is greatly diminished by sleeping under good mosquito nets.

There are very few water born diseases, perhaps due to the high elevation of the sources of streams which provide water for drinking purposes. The rate of flow leads to rapid emptying of infectious material into the seas.

Then too, the process of filtration plays a part, for many of the streams seep into the ground only to reappear at a lower level. Very little amoebic dysentery is seen, typhoid fever is rare and small-pox occurs in a mild form. Dengue fever is frequent and hook-worm infection is present in ten per cent of the population. Excluding malaria, the Island is remarkably free of the ordinary cosmopolitan diseases. The use of mosquito nets and careful attention to personal hygiene are all the measures necessary to maintain average good health.

General Information

The Republic of Haiti has an area of 10,204 square miles, with a population per square mile of about 196. This is six times the average number per square mile in the United States and 1.4 times that of France.

Haiti is very mountainous. A certain nobleman is said to have described the island Haiti by crumpling a piece of paper in his hand and throwing it upon a table. Indeed, the high mountains and the many subsidiary ridges cause a bird's eye view of certain portions to resemble a piece of stiff paper when crumpled.

There are three principal mountain chains. The northern chain, the Sierra del Cibao, extends from central Santo Domingo to Mole St Nicolas, the central chain from central San Domingo to St Marc, and the southern chain runs from the Bay of Neyba in San Domingo directly west through the southern peninsula to Cape Tiburon. This range contains the highest mountains in Haiti; Morn Caba (9600 feet), and La Hotte, south of Jeremie (7460 feet.

The following information as to the altitudes of some of the summits near Port-au-Prince was furnished by the Engineer of Haiti :

Morne Crochu	3500	feet
Gran d'Eau	4600	«
Roseau	4500	«.
Enfants Perdus	3275	«
Fort Jacques	4460	«
Montaignes Noires	6000	«
Morn Tranchant	6425	«
Morn l'Hopital	3470	«

Between the northern and southern peninsulas is the Gulf of Gonave. Port-au-Prince lies near the tip of the triangle. The island of Gonave is some 27 miles from the Capital. The harbor of Port-au-Prince is 200 square miles in area.

The largest river in Haiti is the Artibonite, which rises in Santo Domingo and empties into the sea about 12 miles north of St. Marc.

The plains of Haiti are very fertile. Those of the Artibonite and of the Cul de Sac (east of Port au Prince) are the largest in the Republic. The rainfall is heavy. There is a wet and a dry season but this varies greatly throughout the Island. One portion may be in the middle of the rainy season while another portion is suffering for want of water.

About 20 miles east of the Capital City lies the lake region of the island. The first lake, Azuey, or Etang Saumatre is 15 miles long and 5 miles wide. The boundary line of Haiti and Santo Domingo passes through this lake. The water is salty.

Irrigation is practised in many parts of Haiti, particularly in the plains of the Cul de Sac. There are many ruins of old French irrigation systems.

There are approximately 520 miles of road suitable for motor traffic and these are being constantly extended. They radiate from Port au Prince to Trouin, to Miragoâne, to Croix des Bouquets and to Cape Haitien. Hinche can be reached via St Michel. From Cape Haitien there is a road to Quanam in the which continues into San Domingo. The highway from Port au Prince to Cape Haitien is 171 miles long and was completed late in 1917.

Weights and Measures.

The Metric System of weights and measures is official in Haiti though there are in use some old Haitien weights and measures that are not official.

Weights

- 1 Kilogramme equals 2.20462 pounds or 35.274 ounces
- 1 Pound equals 0.4535 kilogrammes or 553.50 grammes.

Volumes

- 1 Liter equals 0.2641 gallons or 2.1133 pints.
- 1 Gallon equals 3.785 liters

Length

- 1 Meter equals 1.0936 yards or 3.2808 feet or 39. 37 inches.
- 1 Kilometer equals 0.62137 miles,
- 1 Foot equals 0,3048 meters.
- 1 Mile equals 1.6093 kilometers.

Unofficial measures

- 1 Aune equals 45 inches.
- 1 Marmite equals the contents of a five pound butter or lard can.
- 1 carreau equals approximately 3 1/4 acres.
